Kenya

PWRDF has partnered with the National Council of Churches in Kenya for many years in the Kakuma Refugee Camp. It's current project generates income for participants by producing chicken feed. The Upscaling Community Support Systems for Women and Girls Empowerment project is open to people living both in the camp and the host community.

The initiative builds on past progress to strengthen a poultry feed processing cooperative, using the local plant to foster local economic development. The production team's 12 members (six youth and six women) were trained in poultry feed production and marketing strategies. The assorted feed ingredients were procured in two phases to avoid the possibility of ingredients spoiling due to long storage time and the hot climate. The co-op produces three poultry feed products: chick starter, growers and layers mash. Approximately 1,500 people benefit from the project, including the co-op members' families and the poultry farmers who purchase the feed.
